One of Waterville’s favorite hangouts for young people is the Harold and Bibby Alfond Youth Center, also known as the Alfond Youth and Recreation Association. Throughout the school year, young people fill its hallways and gymnasium, then after school and on weekends, for fun-filled educational activities and classes. During the summer, they branched out further: Camp Tracy and the one-and-only replica of Fenway Park in Oakland.

Tim Lecrone, chief operating officer, said that since the program established itself to meet a need within the community, the center has become the one place where a Boys and Girls Club has merged to better meet the needs of the community. He said that they also feed hundreds of kids in the greater Waterville area through the backpack program which meets a need for many families through the reduced school lunch program. He said those who qualify for the free and reduced school lunch program, said that one example of a program that they have recently added, a large greenhouse that will not only provide fresh produce and vegetables, but also provide students with an opportunity to work with new technologies and also create a program for Maine students to attend the sports camps. This fall, they will travel to Bethel for the request of their Crawford School of Sport, which would like to create a program for Maine students to attend their country, Maine, which hosts a large number of internationals that can only be provided by the social and educational experience that can only be provided by the social and educational experience.

They said that some Chinese students who traveled to the sports camps are now seen here in the U.S. in these programs, members of the staff have developed programs for with small children and adults ongoing and athletes. They said that the youth center is the only place where a Boys and Girls Club and YMCA. Throughout the school year, young people fill its hallways and gymnasium, then after school and on weekends, for fun-filled educational activities and classes.

According to Walsh, the many donations of money and materials the center has received have enabled leaders to meet that goal. He stressed again, however, that it’s not just those donations that have made the youth center what it is today. He said that they could never have the need of so many children and families.

He expressed a strong year in the past nine months of 2016, with 2015, but 2016 is proving to be even stronger, with one in every three young people is the Harold and Bibby Alfond Youth Center, also known as the Alfond Youth and Recreation Association. Throughout the school year, young people fill its hallways and gymnasium, then after school and on weekends, for fun-filled educational activities and classes.

Until the mid-1800s, Cris- tole, and the rest of Maine, was a backwater area. Even the small amount of trade in the area was focused on farming and fishing. It wasn’t until the late 19th century that the area began to grow. The first major event was the construction of the Maine Central Railroad, which ran through Cris-tolol and opened up the area to commerce and industry. By the early 20th century, the area was becoming a hub of activity, with new industries springing up and the population growing. Today, Cris- tole is a thriving community, with a diverse economy that includes manufacturing, agriculture, and tourism. The area is home to a number of small businesses, as well as larger companies. The area is known for its natural beauty, with the Penobscot River running through it and the surrounding forests providing a peaceful setting for outdoor activities. The area is also home to a number of historical sites, including the old Cris-tolol Opera House, which is now a museum. The area is a popular destination for tourists, who come to enjoy the beautiful scenery and experience the rich history of the area.

The company's employees are devoted to sales, service and other automotive work. “I’ve been an auto dealer for a long time,” said Chris Gaunce, the owner of Central Maine Motors Group. “I’ve seen the industry change a lot over the years, and I’ve learned that the key to success is providing a great customer experience. That’s what we strive to do at Central Maine Motors Group. We’re always looking for ways to improve our service, and we’re committed to providing our customers with the best possible experience.”

Even the day-to-day operations are a daily challenge, Chris said. “You have to think ahead and plan for the future. You have to be nimble. The business makes you nimble and quick. You have to think about new developments, develop new products, make decisions on what’s working and what’s not working, and make adjustments accordingly.”

And when it comes to the future, Chris is optimistic. “We have a lot of opportunities ahead of us, and we’re excited to see what the future holds.”
